Status: Failed

Candidates must achieve a scaled score of four hundred (400) or better in order to pass the Board Certified Behavior Analyst Examination.

Notes: The percentage correct subscores shown on the graph are based on the content areas included within the 4th Edition Task List. The following content areas have been combined for reporting purposes: Areas A and H; Areas C and D; Areas E and F; and Areas G and I. In addition, we have reported combined subscores for the two major sections of the Task List, Basic Skills and Client-Centered Responsibilities.

The graph shows your performance in comparison to the group of candidates who have “just passed” the examination. These are candidates who obtained scaled scores between 400 and 414 (which is 1 standard error of measurement [SEM]* above 400.) The white bars show the average score obtained by the “just passed” candidates in each of the primary content areas. The error bars indicate the range between plus and minus 1 SEM from the average score, which may be thought of as a confidence interval. The black bars show your performance.

CONTENT AREA CODES	PRIMARY CONTENT AREA	TOTAL QUESTIONS IN CONTENT AREA
A & H	Measurement	24
B	Experimental Design	11
C & D	Behavior Change Considerations & Fundamental Elements of Behavior Change	29

G-K	Client Centered Responsibilities	72
	Total Items	150

Information on your performance by content area is provided to assist you in identifying relative areas of strength and weakness. However, you should use caution when interpreting your content area performance. The percentage correct scores are calculated on fewer items and therefore may not be predictive of your understanding of the content area. When you prepare to take the examination again, you should study all content areas. If you study only the areas in which you obtained lower scores, you might perform better on those areas but worse in other areas.

You may retake the examination at any time before the expiration date of your original application. Retake applications are subject to the same deadlines and late fees as original applications.

You will find the schedules and deadlines on our website at <https://bacb.com/exam-dates/>
